The Department of English invites you to attend its Symposium about:

Enthusiastic Teaching Strategies

Teaching strategies refer to “the structure, system, methods, techniques, procedures, and process that a teacher uses during instruction. These are strategies the teacher employs to assist students learning” (Wandberg and Rohwer , 2010: 164).

EFL Teachers develop enthusiastic teaching strategies to enable students become more active and engaged in the learning process. Some of these strategies are whole-class teaching, small group, work in pairs, individual assignments, role play, reflective learning, structured discussion, decision making, games and mind maps, technologies and computers.

Accordingly, this symposium welcomes papers about enthusiastic teaching strategies used by EFL teachers to increase students class engagement.

The Objectives of the Symposium are:

- 1- Shedding lights on the importance of using enthusiastic teaching strategies to increase students' engagement in the learning process ;
2. Increasing students' critical thinking and motivation to participate in the class.;
- 3- Developing students four skills listening, speaking, reading and writing ;
- 4- and familiarizing students with English culture to use the language correctly in real life.
